

John Chilton School Curriculum Policy

1. Introduction

1.1. At John Chilton School we recognise that the pupil is at the centre of the curriculum, and therefore its design and content aims to maximise the individual’s learning potential. We ensure that pupils’ personal priority needs are the starting point of their education, which we meet through bespoke programmes and structured, regular sessions.

1.2 The curriculum is all the activities that we organise in order to promote learning, personal growth and development. It includes the formal requirements of the National Curriculum and, importantly, the range of additional priorities, specialist curriculum activities and therapy programmes that the school develops in order to engage, enable, empower and equip the pupils for life. It also incorporates the ethos and environment which promote the vision of the school. Spiritual, moral, social and cultural education and British values are both embedded within the curriculum through attitude, resources, examples, and displays; and actively taught through visits, visitors, assemblies and special events.

2. Ethos and Aims

Our school curriculum highlights the vision and ethos of the school:

At John Chilton School, we strive for the development of confident, motivated and independent learners in a sociable, safe and accessible environment; supported by communication and engagement between home, school and partnerships.

It is the means by which we achieve our objective of educating pupils in a holistic way to lead fulfilled and independent lives. We are committed to finding ways of ensuring that all students are engaged in their learning, motivated and enabled to succeed. Teaching and support staff are expected to ensure that, wherever possible, students who are having difficulty or becoming unmotivated are identified early. Appropriate support, encouragement, guidance, different teaching styles, differentiated resources, learning opportunities and work is provided, so that they might continue to participate as fully as possible at the appropriate level. We ensure that all pupils have access to the curriculum by using individualised systems of support.

John Chilton School aims for its pupils to:

- leave the school with the skills, abilities, potential and confidence to meet the challenge of adult life in a fast changing world;
- gain independence skills including, travel, community and cooking skills wherever possible;
- understand their disability and cope with the emotional stresses often associated with disability;
- develop lively, enquiring minds;
- communicate effectively and confidently;
- use the internet safely and with purpose;
- develop positive attitudes towards healthy lifestyles, promoting activity, creativity and competition through sport and leisure;
- develop an awareness and appreciation of art, music and the environment.

3. Organisation and planning (see also separate subject group policies)

At John Chilton School we recognise that the pupils present with complex learning difficulties; and as such, need access to a curriculum that is more diverse than the National Curriculum.

An importance is placed on health and wellbeing, which includes social and emotional support, therapies, leisure skills and PE. This will continue to improve the dedicated therapy times which have developed over the last couple of years; and strengthen the work of the Social, Emotional & Mental Health team. Pupil mental health and development of behaviour for learning skills are seen as paramount to improving progress in academic subjects and as such are given a position of importance in the model.

The subjects of the curriculum have been organised into areas of learning that are similar between Primary and Secondary Departments and will lead to certification in a range of subjects as well as an emphasis on life skills and independent living. (See plan above) Within Phase 3 Blue and Primary Shark Groups the curriculum will be delivered using themes similar to the Early Years, Foundation Stage model.

The Foundation Learning Curriculum (years 9-11) for pupils with complex difficulties recognises the need to emphasise the knowledge, skills and understanding that the students will need to live as fully an independent adult life as possible. Themes are chosen that will enable students to develop and generalise functional skills in English, computing and mathematics, as well as concentrating on living skills such as cooking, cleaning clothes, shopping, managing money, travelling, accessing leisure opportunities and healthy living. Throughout this, pupils receive appropriate information, advice and guidance.

On an individual needs basis, pupils have the opportunity to access courses at Alec Reed Academy if appropriate.

4. Subject leadership

Subject leadership will be organised with the new curriculum model as a basis. Each area will have two to three teachers leading specific subjects within, whilst working as a team with an allocated member of the Senior Leadership Team (SLT). Individuals will be in charge of budgets and the team will work together for lesson observations, learning walks, work scrutinies and development.

5. Assessment

The curriculum will be assessed using “I Can” statements that are written in line with the programmes of study and accredited units, to monitor and evaluate academic progress. There are assessment statements for the health and therapy areas so that an individual’s progress can be calculated accurately and universally. These statements will be monitored using the Onwards and Upwards system; and with the lateral levels of learning developed for measuring progress within a statement, will give a comprehensive and realistic profile of a pupil’s rate of progress and next steps in learning.

The Blue Engagement Pathway through the school measures progress against non- subject specific assessment statements in line with Seven Aspects of Engagement.

6. Diversity (see also Assistive Technology policy, Ethnic Minority Achievement/English as an Additional Language Policy)

Our school celebrates the diverse abilities and needs of our pupils. We recognise that the curriculum must accommodate and adapt for individuals.

We value the uniqueness of every pupil and promote respect, cooperation and understanding of the cultures, religions, genders, races and communities they represent through British values. We ensure that the school environment celebrates the achievements and promotes the diverse backgrounds of families within the community. The curriculum resources, displays, assemblies reflect these values. We actively encourage parents and other guests to visit the school to bring new experiences.

We work consistently with families to develop links that support pupils’ learning and encourage parents to take an active role in the school, and their child’s education. We run parent/carers’ courses and workshops to develop their own skills and understanding. The school employs a part time Family Worker to assist in improving links with the families.

7. Monitoring and review

- 7.1. The Governing Body’s “Pupil, Teaching and Learning Committee” is responsible for monitoring the way the school curriculum is implemented and the relevant policies. This committee reviews each subject area according to the policy review timetable.
- 7.2. Two Assistant Headteachers take responsibility for different areas of the curriculum. One: the curriculum teaching, learning and assessment elements; and the other the SEMH, wellbeing and interventions and access assistance needed. Both are responsible for the overall organisation of the curriculum, and monitoring the work of the subject leaders and relevant continuing professional development.
- 7.3. The Head and SLT monitor the quality of teaching, learning and assessment of the curriculum through observations, learning walks, work scrutinies, moderation, achievement data and pupil voice.
- 7.4. Subject group leaders and individual subject leaders monitor the way their subject is taught through observations, learning walks, examination of long and medium term plans and pupil work scrutinies and surveys.
